

JUDGE NEWMAN AGAIN

The outlook for a Democratic triumph in the election of this Fall in this State grows more encouraging every day. The proscriptive acts of the "Liberal" party are doing the work. In every county the best men of the Readjuster party, of Democratic antecedents, are returning to the great old party, and this Fall they will be found along with their brethren of the Democratic fold. We read with pleasure the proceedings of Democratic meetings, in which these old veterans take part, throughout the State, for it is ominous of victory. Then there is a quiet determination to succeed apparent in the proceedings of these meetings, and an earnestness of purpose is shown that means work and steady work and a thorough organization means success. Depend upon it, the Democracy of this State are at last alive to the enormities and inequities of Mahomedism, and the foul thing will be stamped out.

Wooden Pegs.

It was the privilege of the writer to visit the picturesque little town of Arlington, Va., which at the time boasted a population of two thousand five hundred, three churches, five stores, two hotels, and an extensive car works, and a "peg factory," which, by the courtesy of the foreman, Mr. L. E. White, (who has been employed there twenty-nine years), was shown through, and received valuable information. The timber used is black and yellow birch, which is cut into pieces four feet in length, varying in diameter from eight to fourteen inches. These logs are placed in a building in winter, and the frost extracted by steam. They are then run on a train railway to the circular saw department, and cut into slices or blanks of the thickness desired for the length of the pegs. These are sorted and the knots cut out, and are then passed on to a long bench which contains six machines composed of fluted rollers. The blocks are then run between these rollers, which causes both sides. They are then run through again to cross-crease, or mark out the size of the pegs. Then they go to the splitting machines, which are set with double knives, and cut the blocks into pegs. As they pass the last machine they are sorted, and all knots and discolored ones are removed as they are brushed off into large baskets. These machines are under the care of young women, who appeared much more happy and useful than do many of those who, thumping at their piano, would consider such employment at menial. The next process is bleaching, which is accomplished by the fumes of brimstone, which is unhealthy (those who labor here shorten their lives). They are then placed in large cylinders, which hold eleven barrels, and have six hundred steam-pipes running through them, and revolve one and one-half times to the minute, drying two charges per day to each cylinder. They are then passed in large wooden casks or cylinders, which are revolving rapidly, polish them by the friction, the refuse falling through wire sieves or screen openings, after which they are again passed into a sifter, which separates all the single pegs and drops them into tubs or boxes, leaving the double pegs not been separated in the machine. They are then put in barrels ready for market. The factory running on full time turns out one hundred and fifty bushels, or fifty barrels per day. The sizes go from eight to sixteen to an inch. The lengths go by eighths, two and one-half to twelve. Twenty-six hands are employed, half of them being women. The products of this mill are mostly shipped to Germany and France, and enter largely into the manufacture of toys and fancy goods as well as into the shoe manufactory. Thus the "genius of mechanism" converts, as by magic, the trees from the Vermont mountains into articles of use, which, floating off through the channels of commerce, to far away countries, again return to sparkle the eyes of happy children in toys in which these pegs have become important factors. —N. ### Couldn't Be Deceived Of.

Augustus Sala De Smythe was coming home to Chicago yesterday from Milwaukee, where he has been visiting some lady friends who were on a paying him. He espied a very seductive-looking chap at one end of the car, and tipping a wink to the ladies said: "See me have some fun with the old guy."

As he approached the tramp-looking individual he extended his delicate white hand, and in tones of apparent joy, sang out so all in the car could hear: "How do you do? I have met you before, haven't I?"

"Very like, very like," replied the seductive man.

"But where was it I met you? I can't remember."

"It must have been at Madison, I'm the Sheriff there, and haven't been out of the town for months before. I am just recovering from a severe case of the small-pox—going to Chicago for treatment. Sit down and chat awhile."

"No, thank you, I got off at this station. I never could stand it to ride fast. I will take the freight train at the next station or walk from this on to Chicago," and he disappeared like a fool with a thousand dollars. The old gentleman, who looked like a son of Job, said to a near passenger: "It's a cold day in Wisconsin where those Chicago children head me off for a very long spell."

Moral: He that is wise talketh to himself.—Check.

—Quite a novel spectacle was witnessed at Pensacola, Fla., one day recently, in the way of funerals. A drayman died and his brother draymen attended his funeral on drays.
